

Zynex Announces a Second Utility Patent for Its Blood Volume Monitor

ENGLEWOOD, Colo., Jan. 6, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- Zynex, Inc. (NASDAQ: ZYXI), an innovative medical technology company specializing in the manufacture and sale of non-invasive medical devices for pain management, stroke rehabilitation, cardiac monitoring and neurological diagnostics, today reported it has obtained a second U.S. Utility patent for its Blood Volume Monitor Device. Thomas Sandgaard, the inventor, has assigned the patent to Zynex's subsidiary, Zynex Monitoring Solutions.

Thomas Sandgaard, CEO of Zynex said: "I am excited to receive additional patent protection for our non-invasive blood volume/blood loss technology. Not only are our algorithms well protected but the core principles of detecting body fluid imbalances in hospital settings are now even better protected.

We believe our non-invasive, easy-to-operate technology will serve a huge unmet need to manage patient blood volume in surgical settings, including internal bleeding in recovery and intensive care units. Our first generation CM-1500 device is cleared by the FDA and already in full production."
